

Travel during an election - Parliamentarians

Am I able to undertake travel during an election period at Commonwealth expense?

As a current Member of Parliament seeking re-election at the upcoming Federal election, noting that Parliament has been dissolved, what should I be considering when I seek to travel?

- Is the travel for the dominant purpose of Parliamentary Business (refer Parliamentary Business Resources (Parliamentary Business) Determination 2017); that is
 - Would I travel 'but for' this Parliamentary Business?
 - Is the Parliamentary Business the 'ruling', 'prevailing' or 'most influential' purpose of the travel?
- Have I sought to undertake the travel with value for money as a key consideration?
- Am I prepared to publicly justify the travel expenses and have I acted in good faith?

The Parliamentary Business Resources Act 2017 (PBR Act) is available on the IPEA website (www.ipea.gov.au).

IPEA considerations:

- IPEA can provide personal advice when considering travel at Commonwealth expense.
- Providing IPEA with all of the facts and information relating to the travel will assist in providing definitive advice.
- When assessing the nature of the travel, the definition of Parliamentary Business includes Electorate duties, Parliamentary duties, Party Political duties and Official duties (which only applies to Ministers and Office holders).
- When formally examining the dominant purpose for the travel claim, the onus is on the parliamentarian to justify the expense in the context of all the circumstances including providing objective evidence for the claim.
- When assessing value for money, consideration is given to actual costs, importance and relevance of the business to be undertaken and the effectiveness of the alternatives to travel.

As a current Member of Parliament seeking re-election at the upcoming Federal election, noting that Parliament has been dissolved, can I undertake travel at Commonwealth Expense?

I need to ensure that I meet all of the obligations and principles of the PBR Act:

- Am I travelling for Parliamentary Business?
- Does the travel meet the dominant purpose test?
- Does the travel represent value for money?
- Am I prepared to publicly justify the travel expenses and am I acting in good faith?

Yes

Travel may be undertaken at Commonwealth expense.

No

Travel must not be undertaken at Commonwealth expense.

Information about the travel framework is available on the IPEA website (www.ipea.gov.au)
